The Capelli Institute™

WEBSITE OFFER SHEET

Prepared: October 15, 2026 Prepared for: Prof. Samuel Capelli, The Capelli Group, LLC Scope: The public website at the Institute domain. Nothing touching patient records, intake data, or protected health information.

Mockup: (link added at delivery) This document: (link added at delivery)

1. What you are looking at

A working visual direction for The Capelli Institute, built from your own artwork, not a template and not a stock layout.

The homepage you are about to open is your mockup, implemented as a real responsive web page. The colors came out of your files. The navigation is your nine tabs. The eight program cards carry your wording, exactly as you wrote it. The Five Elements section is your system, with your definitions.

Nothing on it was written by a machine in your voice. You said the words come from your books, and that rule was kept.

What this is not: it is not a half-finished website. It is a direction, built to prove three things before you spend anything: that your design works as a real page, that the catalog structure fits your books, and that the one rule you were firm about is designed in rather than bolted on.

2. The rule that was designed in first

You said it plainly on the call:

> "I don't want them registering online. They have to register here in person for those two."

BIPP and Anger Resolution have no registration on this site. No form. No register button. No payment. Those pages carry the information and a phone number that dials when tapped, and that is all.

This was built as a structural rule rather than a preference, which means the registration components used by the CEU section cannot appear on those pages even by accident. Cognitive Programs is treated the same way until you say otherwise.

The same reasoning already shaped the clinic site, which deliberately has no contact form. A form on a behavioral health page invites people to type things that should not travel by email.

3. What the site is, in plain terms

Nine sections. Two of them are stores.

Section	What it does
Home	The entry page, your crest and motto, routes to everything
Books	Your five titles, each with its editions
Philosophy	The Five Elements system, from your own material
Lectures in Print™	Your numbered lecture catalog, one page each
CEU's	The one program people register for online
BIPP Education Series	Information and a phone number. Nothing else
Anger Resolution Series	Information and a phone number. Nothing else
Cognitive Programs	Information and a phone number, unless you say different
Workshops / Seminars	A request form for organizations that want you to come to them

Plus a Coming Soon page with a QR code, which goes up first so there is something public while the main site is built.

4. Why this is not the same job as the clinic site

This matters more than any other section here, so it is stated up front rather than buried.

The clinic site is one page that is finished the day it launches. It has no forms, takes no money, and its content already existed. That is a genuinely different category of work.

The Institute site takes money and grows. That changes it in four specific ways:

1. Editions are not one product. A Five Elemental Philosophy in paperback and in the signed leather Collector's Edition is two things for sale on one page, each with its own price, its own ISBN, and its own availability. Across five books that is roughly fifteen sellable items, and you are buying a hundred ISBNs, so the real number is larger.
2. Two catalogs that keep growing. Books and Lectures in Print are both lists you add to. That means the site has to let you add a title without calling me. A site where every new book is a phone call to a developer is the wrong build for an author.
3. Taking payment brings its own requirements. A checkout needs a payment account, receipts, refund terms, a privacy policy, and sales tax handling on physical books. None of that exists on the clinic site because it sells nothing.

4. CEU registration plus the calendar. You update your Outlook calendar, the dates appear on the site. That is two connections, not a page.

On features alone this is several times the clinic project. On what happens after launch it is a different category, because the clinic site is done and this one is designed to keep going.

---

5. The price, and the correction that comes with it

5.1 First, a correction

On the call this was described as roughly what the other work cost. That was said before the scope was written down, and section 4 is the reason it was not right. Correcting it here, in writing, at the same weight as the price, rather than letting it turn up later as a surprise.

The clinic site was $1,200, and that figure was for a single finished page with no commerce.

5.2 Two ways to build it, one price

Your site can be built two ways. Both sell your books in every edition, both cover everything in section 6, and both are $1,000 to you. The difference is how you edit it and what you pay vendors each year after launch. Neither is the "right" one. That choice is yours.

Option A: the custom site we built, plus Stripe for book sales. The site you are looking at goes live as it is. Each book edition gets its own secure Stripe checkout link, so a reader taps "Buy," pays, and you get the order with their shipping address. You edit books, lectures, and page text in a simple form-style editor, with a walkthrough.

Site design and build already done	$3,200
Book checkout, editor setup, forms, walkthrough (6 to 10 hours at $85)	$510 to $850
Actual value of this scope	~~$3,710 to $4,050~~
Your price	$1,000

- What you pay vendors each year: about $13 for your domain. Your $48 WordPress Personal plan is no longer needed, and you can let it lapse at its renewal on July 8, 2027. Keep the domain.
- Per sale: Stripe charges 2.9% + 30¢ per card, about $1.17 on a $30 book. Nothing else.
- Best at: the lowest ongoing cost.
- The honest trade-off: the editor is not WordPress. It needs its own login, and it takes a little getting used to. If it never clicks for you, I can make edits for you (section 10).

Option B: stay in WordPress. The same design is rebuilt inside your WordPress account, so you edit in the editor you already know. Books are sold through WooCommerce, the standard WordPress store, with a price and ISBN for each edition, shipping rates, and sales tax settings.

Site design already done	$3,200
Rebuilding that design inside WordPress, plus the store (30 to 45 hours at $85)	$2,550 to $3,825
Actual value of this scope	~~$5,750 to $7,025~~
Your price	$1,000

- What you pay vendors each year: about $313. That is the WordPress.com Business plan at $300 (needed to run a store and a custom design; your current Personal plan cannot) plus the $13 domain, paid by you to WordPress. If you upgrade before July, WordPress credits the unused part of your current plan.
- Per sale: Stripe charges 2.9% + 30¢ per card, about $1.17 on a $30 book. WordPress takes no extra cut on the Business plan.
- Best at: the most familiar editing.
- The honest trade-off: about $300 a year more, every year, and WordPress plugins need routine updates.

5.3 Side by side

	Option A: Custom site + Stripe	Option B: WordPress
Your price	$1,000	$1,000
Actual value of the scope	$3,710 to $4,050	$5,750 to $7,025
Paid to vendors each year	about $13	about $313
Card fee on a $30 book	about $1.17	about $1.17
How you edit	A simple form-style editor, new login	WordPress, the editor you know
Books in every edition, with price and ISBN	Yes, one checkout link per edition	Yes, one store product per title with its editions
Shipping and sales tax	Stripe collects the address; tax and mailing are yours	WooCommerce calculates shipping and tax; mailing is yours
The design you approved	Goes live as built	Rebuilt to match inside WordPress
Best at	Lowest ongoing cost	Most familiar editing

$1,000 either way, as a military and friends rate. The gap between the actual value and your price is goodwill, not a discount that comes back later. It is stated out loud so that the scope in section 6 is understood as the whole of it and anything later is understood as separate.

5.5 Payment

$500 to begin. $500 at go-live in January.

The first $500 starts the work. Nothing is billed between those two points.

5.6 Changes before go-live are free

Colors, typefaces, wording, section order, photographs, which books appear first, how the editions are described. Ask for any of it, as many times as you want, at no cost. Asking for a change does not start a meter.

New functionality is different from a change, and anything in section 7 is quoted before it starts, never after.

6. What the $1,000 covers, in either option

- The complete site design, built from your artwork, across all nine sections
- Every page working correctly on phones, tablets, and desktop
- The books catalog structured for multiple editions per title, with the fields for price, ISBN, and edition already in place
- The Lectures in Print catalog, built so lectures are added the same way every time
- The Philosophy section built from your Five Elements material
- BIPP, Anger Resolution, and Cognitive Programs as information pages with tappable phone numbers
- The Workshops request form, delivered to your email
- The Coming Soon page with the QR code and email capture, live before the main site
- Your YouTube channel embedded
- Book sales for every title in every edition: Stripe checkout links in Option A, a WooCommerce store in Option B, each edition with its own price and ISBN
- Setting the site up so you can add a book or a lecture yourself, with a walkthrough
- Pointing your domain, thecapelliinstitute.com, at the new site
- Unlimited revisions before go-live
- Launch on your domain in January

7. What is not included, and what it would cost

Naming this is the point. A fenced scope at a discount is a fair deal for both sides. An open scope at a discount is a trap for both of us.

Not included	Why it is separate	If you want it
CEU registration with payment and seat limits	A free sign-up form and a paid, capped ticket are different builds	Quoted once the CEU question in section 9 is answered
Outlook calendar connection	Depends on you having a calendar I can publish from, which is not confirmed yet	Quoted once confirmed
Shipping and fulfillment	Someone has to pack and mail hardbacks. That is yours, an operational decision before it is a website one	Not a website service
Texas sales tax	Collecting and filing sales tax on physical books is yours, under your own Texas sales tax permit. The site can be set to charge it; filing it is not a website job	Not a website service
Your payment account	Stripe (or PayPal or Square) is opened in your name, and the money goes to you. I set it up on the site once it exists	Free, opened by you
Email on your domain, such as info@thecapelliinstitute.com	Your domain has no email today. It is a separate setup with its own small monthly fee from the email provider	Optional add-on, quoted if you want it
Photography, and writing copy	Your art and your words. That was always the plan	None
Cover art, synopses, ISBNs, prices	Yours to supply. See section 8	None
Hosting and platform fees	Paid to the vendor, not to me: about $13 a year in Option A, about $313 in Option B (section 5.2)	None
Search engine rankings	Nobody can honestly promise these	None
Ongoing changes after launch	See section 10	None

A note on book sales. Earlier drafts held book checkout back as unpriced. It is now included in both options. What is still held back is paid, capped CEU registration and the calendar connection, because your answers in section 9 change them. Quoting those before you answer would mean guessing with your money.

One security step for you. Your WordPress account currently has no two-step login. Since it holds your domain and your card, please turn on two-step verification with an authenticator app on your own phone. It takes five minutes and protects the domain in either option.

8. What is needed from you

The site cannot launch without these, and they are the single biggest risk to January.

Already received, and further along than expected: - Five book covers, finished - Lectures in Print branding and six lecture concepts - The Five Elements system with definitions - The Coming Soon artwork - Your WordPress access

Still needed: | Item | Why | |---|---| | Price for every book, in every edition | A product page cannot sell without one | | ISBN for every edition that is for sale | Required for the listing and for Amazon | | A short synopsis for each lecture | Each lecture gets its own page | | The Philosophy section text | Pulled from your books, chosen by you | | Your logo as an image file | Currently it exists inside a larger picture | | Your CEU schedule | So the calendar has something in it |

Content was the number one cause of delay on the clinic site, and that site's content already existed. Here it has to be assembled. The practical approach is a cutoff date in early December that leaves build time before January. Launch with the titles that are ready; the rest are added afterward, which is routine once the site is built.

8A. Your colors, for your records

You mentioned you had the codes. They were not needed in the end. Your artwork had them in it, so the palette was taken directly from the files you sent rather than from a list, which means the site is matched to the thing you already approved instead of to a number typed in by hand.

These are now the colors of the site. Keep this list. It is what a printer, a sign maker, a book designer, or any future vendor will ask you for.

Where it is used	Code	What it is
Top header band	`#000C1E`	Deepest navy
Navigation bar	`#00162A`	Navy
Buttons and links when hovered	`#002549`	Lifted navy
Section and footer backgrounds	`#000E1C`	Deep navy
Cards and panels	`#01132D`	Card navy
Headings, accents, borders, buttons	`#FCB367`	The gold. Your signature color
Gold, warm variant	`#FDB868`	Highlights
Gold, deeper variant	`#C8913F`	Gold on light backgrounds, for legibility
Book interior pages	`#F2E4C8`	Parchment
Body text on navy	`#E8E2D4`	Warm off-white, deliberately not pure white

Two notes on why it looks the way it does. The gold is the only accent color in the entire site. Nothing competes with it, which is what makes it read as a mark rather than as decoration. And the body text is a warm off-white rather than pure white, because pure white on this depth of navy glares on a screen. That is the "bring the frequency down" instruction, applied.

If any of these differs from a code you have on file, send it and it is a five-minute change. Nothing is built in a way that makes a color hard to swap.

9. Questions that change the build

Honest answers here are worth more than a fast yes.

1. Option A or Option B? Lowest ongoing cost, or the editor you already know. Both are $1,000.
2. Who prints and ships each edition? You, a printer, or Amazon / IngramSpark. This can differ by edition. The leather Collector's Edition may ship from you while the paperback ships from Amazon.
3. Lectures in Print: printed booklets, PDF downloads, audio, or a mix? Each one sells a little differently.
4. Which payment account: Stripe, PayPal, or Square? And do you have a Texas sales tax permit? Both are in your name, and opening them takes a few days.
5. CEU workshops: paid or free, and is there a seat limit? Also, end of the month or the first? Both were mentioned.

6. What does "edit it myself" mean to you? Adding a new book now and then, changing prices, rewriting page text, or all of it? This is the real difference between A and B.
7. Do you already use a mailing-list tool (Mailchimp, Constant Contact, or similar) for the Coming Soon email sign-up? If not, a free one is set up for you.
8. "Dr." or "Prof."? Your book covers say Dr. Samuel Capelli. Your email signature says Prof. The site should use one of them everywhere. Tell me which and it is done in a minute.
9. The WordPress account is under the name `professorvasquez1`. Who is Vasquez, and is that the account that should own the site long term? The account that owns it is the account that gets billed.
10. Are the audiobooks sold here? You mentioned ISBNs for them.
11. Do you have an Outlook calendar I can publish from?
12. Cognitive Programs: same in-person rule as BIPP and Anger? Treated that way for now.
13. Your lecture sheet numbers two different lectures as 005. Built as sent; say the word and they are renumbered.
14. The sample cover shows ISBN 978-1-7360000-0-0. Real, or placeholder art? A placeholder ISBN on a printed cover causes problems with Amazon later.

10. After it launches

Three options, and the first one costs nothing.

Option one: run it yourself. This is what happens by default at handover. The site is in your account, in your name, on your domain. You add books, add lectures, and post CEU dates yourself, and you will be shown exactly how. Doing nothing lands here, and that is a legitimate place to land.

Option two: call when you want something done. $80 to $100 an hour, quoted before any work begins, never billed after the fact. This sits on top of option one rather than replacing it.

Option three: a standing arrangement. $75 a month, or $150 a quarter, covering routine updates and keeping the platform current.

Option one is the default, and it costs nothing.

11. Two things about timing

January is the date you set, and it is achievable, on the condition that section 8 arrives by early December and the questions in section 9 are answered in the next week or two. The build is not what puts January at risk. Waiting on content is.

The clinic site goes first. It is nearly finished and has its own October date. Running both at once slows both down. The Coming Soon page goes up early regardless, so the Institute is public while the main site is being built.

12. Why do this at all

You have five finished books, a lecture series, a philosophy with its own symbol system, a trademark filed, and a hundred ISBNs on the way. The work is done. What is missing is the place to put it.

Right now someone who hears you speak, or reads one of your books, has nowhere to go. A site that sells a leather-bound Collector's Edition and registers a CEU attendee pays for itself quickly. A handful of book sales and one CEU cohort covers the entire cost.

The trademark was filed because the name is worth protecting. This is the thing the name points at.

13. What this document does not claim

- No promise about search rankings, traffic, or sales volume. Anyone promising those is guessing.
- Paid CEU registration and the calendar connection in section 7 are deliberately unpriced until section 9 is answered. Quoting them now would be guessing with your money.
- Vendor prices in section 5 (WordPress, Stripe, domain) were checked on October 15, 2026. Vendors change their prices; you pay them directly, so you will always see the current figure.
- The colors were read out of your artwork rather than from a list of codes. The palette is in section 8A for your records, and any value is a five-minute change if you have a different one on file.
- No option is recommended over the other. The cheaper one is not automatically the better one for you.
- The mockup is a visual direction, not a finished website, and is not represented as one.

To proceed: confirm the offer and send the first $500. Work starts the same day.

Questions first are welcome. The answers to section 9 are worth more than a fast start.
